COCKTAIL TIME ★ WITH THE ERNIE FELICE QUARTET

It's cocktail time. An instrumental quartet is playing.

The music's as bright and gay as it is familiar . . . admirably styled to your relaxed mood.

At the accordion is Ernie Felice, who first gained recognition as a member of Benny Goodman's small group. His amazing virtuosity is only less intriguing than the remarkably soft, round tones which he alone seems able to coax from an accordion. His music is subtly phrased . . . expressively contrived . . . delightfully different. Smart, sophisticated arrangements, carefully tailored for the Felice quartet, add sparkle to the unique instrumental voicing.

Here are half a dozen all-time favorites, blended into a tapestry of melody and rhythm that serves as an unobtrusive backdrop for easy conversation . . . a delightful centerpiece for those who feel like "just listening."
